The Bootblack's Joke.

"A little more skill expended on that seel would make a more commendable job of it." This was said to a Bowery bootblack near the corner of Grand street early on Tuesday forenoon,

"I)'ye mind hittin' me there agin, boss? I didn't quite tumble." "Touch up the beel a little more;

"Certain, but yer sec, boss, this here

wind blows the shine off faster'n a foller

"I didn't know that 'twas blowing as bard as that."

"Blowiest April Fool's Day ever knowed in the Bowery.'

"Indeed!"

"Certain. You ought ter seed the clerk in the store up here on the corner get fooled hisself. He come out wid a brick in his one hand and an old hat in the other'n, then he clapped the brick down on the walk and slapped the hat over it, 'n' went in 'n' got where he could peck out'n' the winder. All the fellers was watchin', and bimeby an old duffer come along, 'n' drew up 'n' kicked the hat clean out into the middle of tho street. The brick wa'n't there."

"Where was it?" "The wind blowed it out from under the hat while the feller was goin' back into the store. But that was before the wind begun blowin' much. My pard's out a copper on this racket."

"How's that?"

"Why, yer see, he got up the alley there and heat a copper most red hot wid a piece o' taller candle and chucked it out on the sidewalk. But the wind blowed it cool before it struck, 'n' an ole apple woman walked off wid it. Mebby yer think the wind was blowin'

"Certain. Why, there was a feller just beyont the Bowery Garden there, he fastened a thread to a silver quarter n slung it out on the walk. Another feller as seed him do it went up and was goin' to step on the thread 'n' bag the quarter. The sharp feller hauled in his money, but he'll have ter let it go for a twenty cent piece." "How 80?"

"Wind blowed the nicks out o' the dges, and cleaned all the figgers off the side that was up. I tell yer, boss, it's the blowiest April Fool's Day ever knowed in the Bowery. Hi, there! shine?' The gamin was on the track of a Jerseyman who was coming across the street in a pair of rubber boots.-New York Sun.

When a woman burns her finger she eries a little over it and keeps the burn in good condition to show her husband when he comes home, and get sympathy. I man in the same condition will stick his digit in his mouth, kick over the office stool, swear at the boy, and forget all about it. One is the effect of ove, the other of business.

C., April 16.-Vice watch the official records of the debate. and are also carefully observing public opinion as interpreted through private letters and the public press. At a conference of Democratio managers in the senate, to-day, it was decided to make an effort to close the de bate on the army bill before the end of next week. The Democrats evidently feel that they have not made as much capital out of their side of the discussion as they anticipated, though senstors Wallace, Thurman and others state in conversation that they have received letters from all parts of the country from their party friends reassuring them of popular approbation, and urging them to go on with the debate. Senators Blaine, Windom, Conkling, Logan, and, in fact, all the republican senators, are receiving similar communications. The desire of the democratic leaders to terminate the discussion as quickly as possible is the best indication of their private opinions. on the effect of the debate on the publie mind. During the debate in the Senate today on the army bill, after Senator

Beck had concluded Senator Hoar stirred up quite a breeze by inquiring whether Beck still adhered to his state ment, made in the Senate some time ago, that the Government should not have a dollar if the President vetoed the appropriation tills. Beck denied ever using such language. On Hoar reading from the record the expression alluded to, Beck, who is an impetuous Scot, shook his fist across the floor at the Massachusetts Senator, accused him of being impertinent and ordering him to take his seat. Mr. Beck dropped into his seat and had nothing more to say. Mr. Hoar's reference to plantation manners was a hit at the Kentucky Senator's early training as an overseer and negrotrader. Another incident was the an nonneement of Senator Hampton's presence in the retiring-room ready to take the oath. Mr. Dawes was speaking about the white leaguers and the atrocities committee. When Mr. Hampton approached, Mr. Dawes suspended his remarks, but as soon as the Carolina Scoutor took his ceat, he resumed the line of argument, chowing the atrocities committed by the white Democrats in the South. In fact, it is overtasked and they are not only out of money but several hundred dollars in debt. This committee reports that over 6,000 cmigrants have arrived so far. Of these about 2,000 are able to pay their way to Kansas. The remainder were sheltered, fed and partially elothed while here and their passage paid to Wyandotte, Kansas. About seven hundred have been forwarded this week, and there now remains in the city about 350, of whom many are sick and unable to travel. The committee has received in money from all sources less than two thousand dollars, and clothing and food of about eight hundred dollars value. Their disbursements exceed their recipits by about $100, which amount they owe to the Mississippi River. Packet Company for deck passage to Wyandotte.

Elect of Sullivan, a Defaulter and a Fugitive. A Plain Case of Grookedness.

Just now the town of Sullivan, the county seat of Moultrie county, containing about 1500 souls, is stirred from cen tre to circumference by one of the boldest and cheekiest bank robberies ever comhe jolly yesterday afternoon, tried hard to mitted in Central Illinois. On Tuesday get up a fuse with somebody by hailing night last X. B. Trower, the Sullivan banker, disappeared, leaving his depositors about $50,000 short.

The particulars, as related to our reporter by a gentleman in the city to-day from Sullivan, who is conversant with the main points connected with the robbery, are about as follows: X. B. Trower, the defaulter, is a man in the prime of life, red-haired and spare made, and was credited with being an honest and perfectly responsible man .-lle is a member of the well-known and wealthy family of Coles county, and came to Sullivan from Charleston several years ago and engaged in the banking business. From the first he commanded the respect and confidence of the citizens of that village and the farming community of the county. Scarcely any one had the slightest suspicion that he was in the least 'shaky." To all outward appearances everything went along smoothly until Wednesday, 'April 9th, when the cashier, Billy Peckum, who had been in Trower's employ since the bank was opened, hearwas going on that he did not care to be a party to, resigned his position and left the bank. This action on the part of Peckum caused much talk, but it was generally supposed that he left because Trower was in with the license crowd, and he (Peckum) was an active worker in the probibition cause, and so the matter was passed over. On the Saturday following the treasurer of Moultrie county, as he now says, feeling a little uneasy, drew out of Trower's bank $5,000, leaving still on deposit about $300. And still Trower was pointed out as one of the "solid mea" of the town; a man who knew the value of a dollar, and the proper person to be elected. mayor of the pokey town of Sullivan.-The license men raillied to his support, and notwithstanding booming temperance meetings were held in the village night after night, previous to the election day, Trower was elected mayor, defeating Mr. McDonald, the temperance candidate, by 35 votes. But the victorious party didn't rejoice to any considerable extent on held many other positions of trust and Wednesday morning. Between 11 and 12 o'clock Tuesday night Trower skipped out sons. No one knew of the robbery and flight until Wednesday morning last, and when the startling facts became generally known everybody was taken ecopletely by surprise. Efforts were immediately taken to overtake the fugitive, but up to specific. Sold by S. M. Irwin, the Live Sullivan, the officials there had no information of his whereabouts. A trusty man has been sent after Trower, and it is confidently expected that he will be apprehended and brought back to Bullivan sooner or later. If this is accomplished it is expected that the full amount missing will be saved to the depositors by offecting a compromise with the Trower
